Katzenbach Backed

John A. McCone, the director of the Central Intelligence Agency, has recommended that acting Attorney General Nicholas DeB. Katzenbach be named to succeed him, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The newspaper said that President Johnson is seriously considering the recommendation by McCone, who wants to leave, but that Mr. Johnson may instead want Katzenbach to stay on as Attorney General.

Though McCone suggested a number of possible successors, the Times said Katzenbach's name headed the list.
